Customer Experiences

One customer reported a simple charging issue with their laptop. After submitting the device, they were told it would take two days for repairs. However, the laptop was returned after 2.5 days, and unfortunately, the problem remained unresolved. The lack of communication during this time raised concerns as there were no updates or calls received from the service center.

On the day of delivery, the customer encountered further disappointment when the staff claimed that the laptop was not operational in the first place. This led to confusion, especially since they had initially stated the issue would be fixed. Despite this, the customer was charged a hefty 1.8k for what was perceived as an inadequate service. The overall experience left them feeling undervalued and dissatisfied, emphasizing the importance of timely and transparent communication.
